This set of 23 volumes, originally published between 1952 and 1996, amalgamates a wide breadth of research on the subject of phonetics and phonology, including studies on the axiomatic method, nonlinear phonology, and prosodic phonology. This collection of books from some of the leading scholars in the field provides a comprehensive overview of the subject how it has evolved over time, and will be of particular interest to students of language and linguistics.

In the web of cultural processes of late antiquity ablution rites and initiation rites were performed in different forms and in different contexts. Such rites existed in Early Judaism and Greco-Roman cults and were also applied in early Christianity under the label “baptism”, however, not as one fixed rite uniformly performed and interpreted. Baptismal rites developed diversely corresponding to the diversity among Christian groups of which some later came to be perceived as heretical. Remains of art, architecture and texts from these contexts were discussed in two conferences gathering scholars who are excellent within their respective fields: text studies, studies of rites, archaeology, architecture, history of art, and cultural anthropology. These different fields of research have in recent years generated new knowledge that is relevant for the discussion of ablution and initiation rites and their function in late antiquity. At the same time interests of research have altered in favour of a growing cooperation across discipline borders. The present volumes are the outcome of two conferences in Rome 2008 and at Metochi (Lesbos) 2009.

This study investigates the distribution of linguistic and specifically structural diversity in Northeast Asia (NEA), defined as the region north of the Yellow River and east of the Yenisei. In particular, it analyzes what is called the grammar of questions (GQ), i.e., those aspects of any given language that are specialized for asking questions or regularly combine with these. The bulk of the study is a bottom-up description and comparison of GQs in the languages of NEA. The addition of the phrase and beyond to the title of this study serves two purposes. First, languages such as Turkish and Chuvash are included, despite the fact that they are spoken outside of NEA, since they have ties to (or even originated in) the region. Second, despite its focus on one area, the typology is intended to be applicable to other languages as well. Therefore, it makes extensive use of data from languages outside of NEA. The restriction to one category is necessary for reasons of space and clarity, and the process of zooming in on one region allows a higher resolution and historical accuracy than is usually the case in linguistic typology. The discussion mentions over 450 languages and dialects from NEA and beyond and gives about 900 glossed examples. The aim is to achieve both a cross-linguistically plausible typology and a maximal resolution of the linguistic diversity of Northeast Asia.

The present volumes is the result of an international collaboration of researchers who are excellent within their respective fields: interpretation of texts, studies of rites, archaeology, architecture, history of art, and cultural anthropology. They met for two conferences to discuss the significance of rites of ablution, initiation, and baptism and their interpretation in Late Antiquity, Early Judaism, and Early Christianity. The volume establishes a new international standard of research within these fields of scholarship.

Im Rahmen organisierter Sozialisation und im Spannungsfeld zwischen Hilfe und Kontrolle reproduzieren die Professionellen der Sozialen Arbeit soziale Normen. Diese ethnografische Studie zeichnet gelingende konstitutive Bedingungen in Interaktionen nach. Gerade die Offene Kinder- und Jugendarbeit mit ihrem Alltagsbezug und ihrer Offenheit erweist sich als erkenntnisreich hinsichtlich der Erlangung von Sanktionsmacht, sozialer Kontrolle, der Durchsetzung sozialer Normen und der Initiierung von Selbstregulierungsprozessen bei Kindern und Jugendlichen. Der Autor zeigt, dass keine soziale Normen zwischen Professionellen und Adressatinnen und Adressaten ausgehandelt werden, sondern lediglich Situationen, in denen sie zur Anwendung kommen. Zudem vertreten Kinder und Jugendliche Normalitätsvorstellungen, die von den Professionellen wiederum nicht beachtet werden. Ein sozialpädagogischer Diskurs zu und über soziale Normen und den dahinter liegenden Normalitätsvorstellungen – so wird eindringlich gezeigt – ist für eine fortschreitende Professionalisierung unerlässlich bzw. längst überfällig.

Highly proficient speakers of a second language who began acquisition as adults are rarely the object of second language acquisition research. In the study described in this book, the speech of 36 advanced learners of German, 20 of whom were considered to have "near-native" proficiency was recorded, transcribed and analyzed according to the "Quaestio Model". The focus of the study was the information structure of the learners' spoken texts and its implications for word order. The study revealed differences in the information structure of texts of learners and native German speakers even for those learners whose performance was nearly indistinguishable from L1 German speakers. The author discusses possible reasons for these differences, suggests implications for second language acquisition theory and draws up lesson plans for using the insights brought forth by the study for the second language and translation classrooms.

Inhaltsangabe: Abstract: Changing market conditions have made it tougher on companies to stay competitive. Long-term customer bonding can provide a competitive advantage. Today's customers' wishes have put forth the need for experience marketing though. This trend has to be taken into account when planning on bonding with customers. One way to create a platform for experience is event marketing. This final thesis focuses specifically on the use of events with regard to customer relationship bonding. In this study, an answer will be provided to the following problem statement. Event marketing supports bonding by providing an opportunity for direct and personal contact between a company and its customers. Furthermore, customers are offered the possibility to experience a company and its products in a pleasurable surrounding. Events can either be business- or leisure-oriented, depending on the overall character of the event. Events provide a variety of advantages to both the company and its customer, ranging from cross-selling and exchange of information to risk and cost reductions. Event marketing integrates in the modern concept of customer relationship marketing by opening a constructive dialogue between the customer and the company. Customer relationships are built on trust which can be established by creating a special bond between a company and its customers. These bonds can exist on various levels and not all customers are suited for long-term bonding. To insure that events support and do not hinder these relationships its success should be controlled in different ways. These controls should be applied before, during and after the event to avoid pitfalls, remove obstacles, and reach the set aims. Events are a powerful communication instrument due to their experience-oriented character but have to be used accompanied by other marketing instruments such as classical marketing, PR, sponsoring, etc. Events can also be used to achieve strategic aims such as enhancing the image of the company and its products, product presentation and others. In order to go along with a company's corporate concept, events have to be integrated in the overall marketing strategy though. This study shows that the application of events as a mean to create customer relationships can be effective when the following aspects are considered thoroughly: The selection of the right customer to bond with, the integration of events in the communication mix, the integration [...]

Wie funktioniert die professionsethische Selbstkontrolle in den Wissenschaften? Anhand von Interviews mit Naturwissenschaftlern untersucht Andreas Franzmann die Haltung, mit der Forscher sich in ein Unbekanntes vorwagen, und gewinnt dabei ein Bild ihres professionalisierten Habitus. Es zeigt sich: Forschung ist ein Prozess der Krisenbewältigung, der sich ständig zwischen Neuem und Routine, Durchbruch und Alltag, Neugierde und Disziplin bewegen muss. Der Detailreichtum der Analyse erschließt ein lebendiges Bild dieser Spannungspole, zeigt biographische Antriebe auf und führt in aktuelle Forschungsfragen der Fächer ein.
