Think you know all there is to know about investigating paranormal phenomena? Think again! Chris Carr and Clarissa Vazquez shine a whole new infrared flashlight on exploring the strange and unusual that will make you stop and think ...really think! Enter the realm of "psychosomatic pareidolia" - two really big words that describe a common problem within the field of paranormal research and the "evidence" being presented. "This book is by no means a declaration that ghosts, UFO's, and cryptids aren't real; it's just the opposite! It is our hope that when you've finished you will have a better understanding of this simple, yet highly overlooked occurrence and can present data and evidence that will be more difficult to dispute!"

Pareidolia is the phenomenon where the mind perceives shapes, or hears voices, where none apparently exist. But what if what you were seeing was really there? What if the voice you heard really was speaking to you, calling you?

Arches Pareidolia: Faces & Creatures in the Rock is a humorous book that has over 200 pictures that David Olsen took of rock pareidolia in Arches National Park. David adds value to your experience while visiting and viewing the natural wonders and scenery of the park. David shares pictures of rocks that look like faces, creatures, monsters, cartoons, birds, fish, animals, aliens, muppets, action heroes, dinosaurs, and other familiar things. David names the rock formations that you may find humorously accurate. The rock pareidolia in the park is interesting and amusing. Many people know that Arches National Park has the largest concentration of significant natural arches in the world, but they do not know the park also has a high concentration of rock pareidolia. Many of the rocks David named because they look like someone or something familiar to him. You may see them differently. Viewpoints, angles, lighting, shadows and our imaginations can often change what we see. However we see it, the illusions are just delusions to both of us! The images in the rock formations are called, "pareidolia." Pareidolia is the illusion or perception of images, patterns or associations based on the rocks' composition, makeup and form (rocks looking like familiar things). When we see pareidolia, we often emphasize details that fit our image or de-emphasize details that do not. Sometimes we connect the dots or fill in the blanks to make our images more prominent. David names the rock formations to help place the images in your brain. Without the names, you would think that you are only looking at rocks! Arches Pareidolia: Faces & Creators in the Rock can be used as a guide book. The pictures of rock pareidolia are in order and along designated roads and trails in Arches National Park. It is up to you to try to find them. Please stay on the trails and respect the quiet sculptured beauty of the area. Arches is a special place to get a nature fix or therapy for your soul. It is an amazing treasure. Good luck with your rock pareidolia hunt.

Sometimes it is in the blink of an eye that we notice. Sometimes we have been looking at some thing for years and one day we see something else and we connect different. The phenomenon is often thought of in could watching and how we can see familiar shapes, animals, faces or things significant to us. When we look into our relationships and apply this same phenomenon we can get an intriguing outcome. Who we thought we knew, changed. Who we thought we were is no longer who we can be for the world. That's what so many of the entries in this book are born from. The idea that upon a deeper look, a more thorough evaluation we will see things like we have not ever seen them before- this may cause to feel differently about ourselves and the people in our life.

" Os olhos tremeram ao transmitir os impulsos eletroquímicos e o cérebro pulsou inundado de sangue numa tentativa pífia de decodificar o que os olhos viam. Por falta de parâmetro de comparação, o córtex visual entregou a imagem de uma criatura quase humanoide em seus traços, exceto pelo fato de que a pele era composta de escamas verdes acinzentadas, movendo-se constantemente em direções impossíveis. Não havia cabelos ou nariz. Nem mesmo fossas nasais, apenas, sobre a área em que devia haver lábios, uma profusão de incontáveis tentáculos movendo-se desordenadamente, fazendo-lhe as vezes de bigode, queixo e maçã do rosto. Mas o pior de tudo eram os olhos. A começar do fato de que o plural não era aplicável. Um único globo ocular, maior do que cinco olhos humanos, ocupava a região central do que poderia se chamar de rosto. Não havia pálpebras. Em seu lugar, dezenas de pequenos vermes brancos devoravam carne e escamas, passando-se por contorno. A esclera de um vermelho só antes visto nas trincheiras da primeira guerra e a íris ... a íris de uma imensidão negra e incomensurável que parecia minuciosamente projetada para clarificar a insignificância da alma humana na vastidão da existência. Um décimo de segundo daquela visão foi o suficiente para que a personalidade dele se fragmentasse em outras cem. E para que essas cem desaparecessem alegremente na eterna noite do esquecimento. Ou teria sido, se essas mesmas não tivessem imediatamente se reunido num impulso de curiosidade ridícula quando a criatura falou: —Bom dia, senhor. Teria um momento para ouvir sobre a palavra de nosso senhor Cthulhu?" Pareidolia/ Apophenia Lulu.com

Pareidolia es como una experiencia romántica en la que la figura y fondo de escrituras adquieren el relieve de formas y valoración de fuentes de referentes y derivas lectoras. Pareidolia es un texto que disemina la capacidad de encontrar imágenes reconocibles donde quizás no las hay, es como el trance en un espejo deformante en trayectoria de colisión con desarrollos teóricos y estéticos no convencionales, en un presente ilusorio y metafísico del avance de la dialéctica que recoge de lectura en lectura, de poetas, escritores, novelas, ensayos, elementos significativos que persiguen dar cuenta de obras literarias en el arduo intento de manifestar la música interior que resuena en la escritora. Ana Abregú, con Pareidolia, recopila textos críticos sobre diversas obras literarias que estimularon un trabajo sobre la palabra y la exploración sobre las posibilidades del lenguaje. "Pareidolia's field of play is that of the questions behind the questions. Granted, as Watson suggests, a determinist science has proved humans are basically simple machines, rotors, churning a mix of DNA & biological chemicals. And granted a determinist outside of persuasive ads, sellthrough thoughts & FB solicitations have configured people into simple, will-free consumption buckets. Watson poses this question: 'Not only is there but has there even been a human life?' And if there has been how could it survive under this determinist assault? The answer unrolls in querulous, curious infernos of seductive lyrics. Referencing (and poking) Stevens, Hopkins, Eliot & Baudelaire, these poems (like those of the last master mentioned) offer the reader the excitement & ecstasy of a sponge bath of blood in the basement of the famed Heartbreak Motor Lodge." --Jim Feast
